The course of Gov Pattison in deckining to order the National Guard to Homestend until Sheriff McCleary had exhausted all means in his power to preserve order is generally commended. The prevailing opinion here is that had the military appeared on the scene the bloodshed would have been much greater. The advent of the armed and uniformed men of the State troops to guard Carnegie Works and to act as protectors of the non union men would have excited the strikers to all possible resistance.

the rule of this important industry These points have been discussed on this page so frequently during recent years that it is unnecessary for us to follow the argument in detail, but the general conclusion we regard as Irrefutable, namely, that the decline of American shipping in foreign trade is directly attributable to neglect and lack of protection The prosperity of the coastwise and lake marines which have been systematically protected by law, emphasizes the correctness of this view So far as the decadence of the commercial marines on the high seas has any bearing upon the protective policy offers a negat ve proof of its utility. This is almost the only National industry which has not been protected, and it has steadily declined. Al other industries have been protected, and they are flourishing. With reference to remecial legis atlon. Senator Frye speaks with no undertain sound. Pree ships is the Democratic nestrain, presented by The an Pres-Trade thereigh. Setator Trye seen not find it difficult to press the state of ships, without promoting the revival of the carrying trade under the flag. The privilege of raising the American flag over foreign built ship will not enable our vesset owners to compete successfully with rivals employing oheaper labor and receiving in many instances aid from their

The true remedy lies in systematic protection of the shipping interests of the nation by liberal mail payments and navi gation bounties When the United States ceases to be the only great maritime na tion which neglects its commercial ma rine the flag will be restored to the high seas That is the national policy to which the Republican party is fully committed The Democracy stands for free ships as well as for a low tariff and if it be alllowed to carry out its policy as embodied in the to carry out its policy as embodied in the Fithian bill now before Congress it will destroy the shipbuilding industry and abandon to foreigners the constwise and lake fleets. That is an issue which the patriotic Senator has done well to present with fine argumentative power on in Washington, July 7. After routine morning business, two resolutions offered yesterday by Mr. Gallinger and Mr. Peffer as to the conflict at Homestead, Pa, were laid before the Senate. The two Brooklyn, Tresolutions were read.

Mr. Quny suggested that under the rule and law they be referred to the Committee on Contingent Expenses.

Hits-Louisville, 11; Boston, 12. Et- of Republican National Commit

Homestead was contempt of the authority of the State of Pennsylvania. Its manner was menacing and insulting. It was difficult for American citizens (whether in the right or wrong) to submit to being driven by an aru ed force. He maintained that those citizens of Homestead were right. He maintained that according to the principles of law that should hereafter be applied to the solution of those troubles, they had the right to be there. That made it necessary for him to assert that those men had right to employ ment there. Those large manufacturing establishments would have to be, hereafter, regarded as political establishments in a modified sense, that their owners would have to be regarded as holding their property subject to co-relative rights of those without whose services their property would be utterly valueless, and that he only conceded to them the right to reasonable profit on the capital invested in their enterprises. He maintained, furthermore, that those workmen, having spent their lives in that peculiar line of service, had a light to insist on the permanency of their employment, also on reasonable compensation for their services.

The Prevalence of Cholera Causes an Exodus and a Riot.

St. Petersaure, July 7. The preva-lence of cholers in Astrakan has caused a panic in that city.

A large number of workingmen, after receiving an advance in their wages to in-duce them to remain in Astrakan, made preparations to desert their employers and preparations to descrit their employers and leave the place.

The authorities tried to compel the workmen to fulfil their contracts and the result was that a serious riot took place. The police could not handle the mob and the military was summoned to assist. The rioters were not dispersed until a number had been killed or wounded.

THE OPERA HOUSE Contract Closed for a Large Amount of New Scenery.

The managers of the Opera House closed a contract yesterday with one of the leading firms in Boston for a large amount of new scenery. Included at the contract is a new and magnificent drop curtain, with all of the front bouging draperies and proscenium wings painted in harmony. The design for the curtain is a fasty of rangement of rich draper (s of satin and plush, with a beautiful Venetian view in the centre. The new scenes are largely exteriors and the contract cidis for artistic work of the first order. The curtain and seenery are to be delivered in Bangor on the 15th of August, so as to be ready for the opening of the senson on the 224.

hush of noise that came to her that an tunin morning—was not due to a presen timent of Sister Martha's near depar ture. The world looked very beautiful to her eyes that crisp, blowy day There was a little gap between the Woods house and old Mr Simons' place, where she could catch a distant glumpse of the hills with the yellow foliage shining against the blue like golden billows fringed with fiame The pale glimmer of the fad, mg willows, the white stems of young burches seen through thinning veils of leaves seemed like a new and delightful picture Today there were no troops of school children passing by with their dinner baskets and books, but a great company of emigrating birds settled down in her front yard, preened then feathers and consulted together with nonev talk on the wall, and at last rose and flew away with a great whir of wings. The smallest incident made her

It was easier to love her neighbors when her head ached less and the films of weakness, spotted with black, ceased to dance before her eyes. She held up the little rose colored garment she was making in her thin pale ingers and felt an unusual sense of comfort and warinth steal over her as she listened to the soft snapping of the logs on the old brass andirons The large empty house seemed warmer and cozier now that she knew Sister Martha was speeding homeward on the train. In country ph ase Mrs. Whiteumb was no company for her sister in lw This could not find a common meeting ground and to have her in the house even though unseen brought with it a sense of oppression

Me intime the captain sat just where his visitor had left him, when she closed the front door and he heard her footsteps retreating down the walk. He felt utterly weak and unmanned the water stood in great drops on his forehead as he hved over the stene and saw what was in his heart when he was tempted to clutch the woman's throat He had knocked down a mutinous sailor once on shipboard with a belaying pin and he remembered hiving had the same sensa tions then before the fellow began to show signs of life. But there were other things to think of terrible as that mur derous impulse looked to him and deep as was the premine over whose brink he had taken a fiving glimpse. The confession of that woman came back to him bit by hit out of the turmoil of his sensitions. He saw how poor Vime had been tricked by Martha Whit cumb, and her own mother who was rabid to selve upon any rumor to his hurt however black. But Vine had loved him all the time. Her soul inno cent and white had taken no stain Even if she believed he had wronged her she had forguen him. She had faded and withered and suffered in asterior through the years but had kept a glimmer of trust in him alive in her gentle heart. She had sat by her win dow to watch him as he passed with averted head. She had betened for his footsteps and lived on the signs of his existence-the smoke going up from his shimney the haht in his window, had known when he came and when he went had trained has one to eitch all r pate of him in the wind
